FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

MONDAY, April 1-6 P. M. The share market is exceedingly dull, but compara-tively steady. Transactions are limited, reflecting the closeness of the money market. Brokers, however, are as joily as Mark Tapley in anticipation of improvement, and the steadiness of the market under so many difficulties is certainly a favorable symptom. At the early board stocks were quite strong, but fell off during the day ½ a 1 per cent, with one or two exceptions. After the boards the market closed steady, with a slight im-reneral expectation that the commencement of the week would usher in an easier money market has not been ealized. The bank contraction in loans—amounting to searly $8,000,000 in two weeks—has seriously deranged business, and it will probably take some little time to recover. The bank statement of this week, as compared that of March 23, exhibits further important changes. The line of loans has decreased $4,117.951, of deposits $3,895,365, and of specie $621,304. There has been an increase in legal tenders amounting to $1,554,853, and in circulation $149,794. The details of the two

Southern Labies Robbed at the St. Nicholas Hotel, vesterday morning about eight o'clock room No. 251 of the St. Nicholas Hotel, occupied by Mrs. Harriet Wyche and her sister, Mrs. Virginis Cook, of Macon, Ga., was entered by a thief while the ladies were at breakfast and robbed of three valuable dresses, cloth sack, breastpin and other articles not to exceed $300 fin value. Later in the very insignificant sum of $9. Andrew Ryan being the purchaser. On being taken to the station house Johnson confessed that he had stolen the goods from the St. Nicholas Hotel, and gave Sergeant Aliairs such information as led to the recovery of the remainder of the stolen dresses at 92 Baxter street, where the prisoner had disposed of them. In the possession of Johnson several keys to rooms in the St. Nicholas Hotel were found, and he confesses to taking the key of Mrs. Wyche's room posed of them. In the possession of Johnson several keys to rooms in the St. Nicholas Hotel were found, and he confeases to taking the key of Mrs. Wyche's room from the parior table, where she had left it, and opening the door of her room. Ryan was arrested by Sergeans Allaire for purchasing the goods with a guity knowledge, and Justice Dowling held both the prisoners for trial. Johnson, who has the appearance of being a Chinaman, is twenty-three years of age, and a native of Somerville, Morgan county, Alabama. On Thursday lest the same thief cutered the room of Mr. Holman, one of the regular boarders at the St. Nicholas Hotel, and stole a valuable overcoat, with which he escaped. The coat has since been recovered by Captain Jourdan, of the Sixth precinct. Johnson served in the rebel array, which fact was known to the ladies whom he had robbed, they recognizing him in court.

ATLANTIC AND GREAT WESTERN RAILROAD. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE HERALD.

The Great Western Railroad James Mc-Henry-Reform-Business Affairs, &c. Lospos, March 6, 1867. Knowing the interest you take in Mr. McHenry's afanowing the interest you take in air, incremy's arfairs and the Atlantic and Western Railroad, I send you a report (in the London Ness) of a meeting of parties interested in that railway held here yesterday. You may understand the situation better if I give you my own partly by the panic which affected all railways, shares, &c., on this market, and also by the failure of Sir Morton Pete and others, known to be concerned with the financial affairs of the company.

Toward the end of the year the depression was accelerated by the action of unprincipled parties here who resorted to every plan they could devise to destroy the confidence of those who held bonds and to injure Mr. McHenry. A series of violent and scandalous attacks upon his integrity and upon the condition of the railway appeared in Hiram Fuller's paper, the Commopolitan. They were written by an unnatural foe, in a spirit of vindictiveness that made them utterly unfit for publication. In all my knowledge of newspapers in America and England I can recall no such glaring abuse of journalism. While these attacks were going on here, and McHenry was galiantly bearing up against he difficulties, his sfifting in America were all going wrong. The managers of the railway there were managing the work with an utter disregard for any interests but their own. The course of events in London seems to have led the people at Meadwille to believe that a revolution would ensue here ending in the deposition of McHenry. At such a crisis they should have supported him. This they have not done; on the contrary, they have done much to cripple and emparrass him; and by starting a rebellion of their own have precipitated events here. They probably internded to combine with the disaffected proprietors here and obtain entire control of the property, leaving McHenry 'out in the cold.'

The official report just issued discloses the most extraordinary mismanagement in America during the past year. The receipts are far below what they should be, freights were reduced when they might have been increased, and the most wonderful favoritism shown in certain branches of the traffic. The expenditures are so enormous that it area one's credulity to believe they could have been honestly incurred.

What money remained, after paying the shameful charges, is Every suggestion of the opposing party and every at-tempt to change McHenry's programme was promptly voted down, and every measure of his was carried. Last week I felt much solicitude for his position; to-day I feet none.

Polities here are in a very interesting and unsettled state. The Derby Ministry will be tolerated as long as there is any chance of working a reform bill through them, though I would not be surprised to hear at any time that Lord Derby had resigned, in disgust and despair of satisfying at the same time his own party and the opposition. The reform bill once disposed of, there will no doubt be a change of government and reorganization of parties. The defection of Lord Cranbourne will widen the breach between him and Disraeli, and give Lord Cranbourne the leadership of a large section of the conservative party in the House.

Business affairs are very dull; not a ripple of speculation tion. The limited company bubble is literally burns, and most of the promoters zone up with their schemes. What will turn up next no one knows, and few venture to predict. I am inclined to think if we get things settled in America, and arrange our differences with England before the end of this year, that the next European manis for speculation may turn towards the United States, very likely to the purchase of Southern lands and grand plans of emigration. In another year something must be done with the vast accumulation of money now lying idle here and on the Continent. The United States is in high favor. If we have no serious mishap this will increase.

be doing all in their power to restore the property to its real value. He then moved a resolution to the effect that it was desirable, as far as possible, to avoid all condicts between the different classes interested in the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Cumpany, and that in order to provide for unity of action, a committee should be appointed authorized to represent the divisional bond-holders, the consolidated bondholders, the holders of the certificates of debentures, and the general creditors.

Mr. Cave, M. P., in seconding the motion, said it would be necessary for him to explain why he did so. Soon after the committee of investigation was adopted he was asked by the divisional bondholders to sit at that committees and to report to them their present and future prospects. He undertook the duty with some auxiety, and he had read and possessed himself of all the necessary information in connection with the company trouble, and they knew that such companies generally increased their difficulties by going to law with each other. There had been great temptations held out to the first bondholders to seize the line and peasess it at once and forever for themseves, regardless of those who followed them. He could assure the meeting that the first bondholders had no such present intention or desire. They had learned by investigation in America and in England, and from the highest legal authority in both countries, that the other parties interested in the milway could, from the fact that the American laws gave such particular powers, and also the fact that the line passed through different States, impose such impediments that it was considered the wiser policy of the divisional bondholders to work with all classes of shareholders for the purpose of advancing the general interests of the undertaking. Such being the opinion of the first bondholders, he felt satisfied it would be the opinion of the other classes of claimants. (Hear.)

Nr. Moars saked whether the unsecured and common creditors would not rark, it shey got judgment, with the first mortgagees? He also wished to know whether the New York bonds were not sterling bonds and to be paid in sterling?

Mr. Wallace said he had a question to put which went to the very root of the matter. Before going into any details, and before a committee was appointed, it would be well to know what power that committee would have over the directors, the American board and the contractor; because, if the committee had no such power, it would be of no use whatever.

Mr. Those, while he fully agreed with the spirit in which the chairman had approached the subject and the mode of selecting the committee, would have liked to know something more in detail as to the nature of the plan which had been shadowed forth by the chairman, as well as the names of the gentlemen proposed as the committee. If they had a committee composed of men of business like Mr. Watkin it would give confidence to all classes of creditors.

Mr. J. Cunsuscross suggested that instead of having one representative only of each class of claimants it would be desirable to have three. (Cries of "Two.") The matters into which the committee would have to inquire were vast in extent, complicated in their nature, and would require all the energies of competent men of business to deal with them satisfactorily.

Mr. RINSDALE said he had been studying with the utmost care the huge and unprecedented report, for bulk and weight, which had been presented to them, and he was almost aghast at its discrepancies, misrepresentations and mystifications. (Cheera,) At the last meeting of the company. In 1866, they were told that the Gil Creek Company was made by the money of the Atlantic and Groat Western Railway Company, and that it belonged to the company. Now that line, it appeared, had passed into ther hands, and though it was paying thirty per cent upon the cost of construction and rolling stock Mr. McHenry told them he had not received a single farthing

The amendment having been seconded, Mr. LANCE said that as a debenture holder he was quite sure that the interest upon the thirty millions of deliars, included under the heads mentioned in the report, could be easily paid from current revenue. It would have been so before, but expenses had been incurred which were wholly unnecessary, and he was quite sure they did not receive the money they were entitled to. The expenditure in every department had been excessive, and he hoped the committee, if appointed, weeld look carefully into these matters, and that the next two years' income would be spent upon the line, which he felt convinced from his knowledge of it, as compared with other American lines would, when in full working trim, yield an ample dividend to every class of investors.

Mr. Filders, M. P., thanked Mr. Lance, who was so high an authority on the subject of American railways, for the statement he had just made, and as a somewhat similar suggestion would be made to the meeting by a resolution which would be aubsequently proposed, he trusted Mr. Green would withdraw his amendment.

Mr. Danvert said it was to be regretted that the committee had not announced before what they intended to do. It was a question with him, as a first creditor, whether persons in that position should not stand aloof from the committee and rest on their legal rights in America. The American law was certain to protect their rights, and if they assisted the committee no one could say who would be benefited. There never was such a heipless set of creditors as they all appeared to be at present; but he supposed there were powers somewhere.
They hardly new who was the manager. (Exciamations o "The contractor," "The mortgage deed gives powers," &c.)

A Caupiton wished to know whether, if a committee were appointed, Mr. McHeury and the directors in America would retain any voting power as regarded the management.

Mr. Roune Bory maintained that in such a gigantic affair instead of only four the committee should contisof at le line does carn money enough to pay, but you must get it. The committee you propose to appoint will have to get it. The earnings are there, and I promise to give the committee the amistance of all the powers I ever had or ever will have. (Cheers.)

Mr. Laine, M. P., moved that Sir William Russell, Bart. M. P., and Crawshay Bailey, Esq., M. P., do constitute the committee, with power to add to their number. He had great pleasure in moving that resolution as the holder of a connederable amount of bonds. He thought the only prospect of rescuing the railway from its present position lay in the appointment of men in whom they had confidence, and who would have power to act with the rigor and authority which the present critical state of things demanded. With respect to the future of the line, it was certain that if the working expenses could be reduced from seventy-eight per cent to fifty or fifty-five per cent, and the rolling stock be increased and the lines complete, these earnings would amount to £10,000 or £12,000 per mile, and would place all their stocks at par. He had some experience in those matters, and he would instance the Erie line, which was in a much worse position than this line was, and yet, like many other American lines, when put in a fair position to develop its capabilities it came round in a year or two. He ascribed the present state of this company to the recent depreciation in the value of all kinds of capital, and especially railway capital; and also to the fact that the depreciation in this ade had demoralized the people in America, who had been enabled, being under no efficient control, to run up the working expenses to a preposterously high point But he had no hesitation in saying that with deferred coupons for two years they would be able to apply some £20,000 or £30,000 to clear off all current and pressing debts and to place the line in such a pogition as would raise the ordinary stock nearly, if not quite, to par. (Hear, hear.) But if they quarrelled among themselves and dld not aved l

Mr. Chawshay Bahley, M. P., seconded the resolution, which was agreed to unanimously.

The Charman then moved that in order to place the committee in a position to take legal steps for the appointment of a receiver, should such a step be necessary, and to enable them to take measures for placing the property on a sound footing, the meeting recommend the consolidated bondholders to cut off and place in the hands of the committee, as trustees, coupons for two years, from the 31st of March, 1867, to the 31st of March, 1869, for which income bonds under the seal of the company be issued, having five years to ron, warrants attached, at seven per cont per annum, payable half yearly, with interest, it being understood that all coupons prior to the 51st of March, 1867, were to have priority, and be pald out of the first available assets of the company.

Mr. Coffland seconded the resolution, which was agreed to unanimously.

Mr. Cave, M. P., moved that all expenses already incurred, and that might be hereafter incurred, be destrayed out of the funds of the company, and, if necessary, a formal resolution to that effect should be proposed at the next general incoling of the shareholders of the company.
